Dear Buddy,

When Rae left this evening she was uneasy because she'll be driving the rental car as we go to court in the early a.m. on the King case and there is a winter snow forecast. She's not afraid of snow - she loves it! She's uneasy because I'm not supposed to get bumped or bruised and most drivers around here can't handle snow.

But she felt fine when she got home and found a check. We all feel fine about it, thanks.

Don't recall if I told you I also sued the CIA for King records. They are still stonewalling and the case is still in court. But here is a L.A. Times syndicate story on some of them, never-told-before. For some reason the Atlanta paper took the second paragraph and its credit to my litigation out.

If Dave didn't tell you, I've won the battle for the FBI's abstracts of its King files. They have a synopsis of every record. "obody ever went after them before because nobody knew they existed. Now the FBI has changed that - it no longer makes abstracts. But the court ordered them to provide these and tomorrow we may get a schedule. They'll try to stonewall as much as they can.

Thanks and best wishes,
